

UNITED STATES NAVY STARTS SCHOOL FOR STUDY OF BIG WAR

SECRETARY DANIELS OPENED
NAVY WAR COLLEGE AT NEWPORT, R. I., TODAY.

OLD THEORIES INTO DISCARD

Secretary Points Out the Wonderful Strides That Have Been Made In War.

(Associated Press)

Newport, R. I., June 26—In an address at the opening session of the Navy War College here today, Secretary Daniels appealed to American naval officers to profit by the lessons that are being taught by the great war in Europe and to fearlessly discard all theories which fail to stand the acid test. He referred briefly to the navy program for the coming year and expressed confidence that congress would authorize any increase recommended.

"In personnel and material the navy is larger than ever before," Mr. Daniels said.

Trained and Fit.

"Its men are trained and fit. Its experts in every department are active to remedy any defects of the past and to take advantage of all that has been learned in the only true school in which this knowledge may be obtained, by observing through our experts in Europe all that may be learned from actual war.

"As you look abroad you see the foundation of old theories crumbling every day. Old tactics, old strategies, old theories of naval warfare which have stood unchallenged, as almost axiomatic since the times of Carthage and Rome grappled together in the Mediterranean, are disappearing over night. If war upon the land has reverted to the bayonet and hand grenade, war upon the sea has leaped forward at a single stride and broken almost every shackle of ancient convention.

Main Fleet Withdrawn.

"I have seen the main fleet of the greatest sea nation withdrawn from the seas to some secluded harbor with out having fired a shot during the first year of a mighty conflict. We have seen battles begun at ranges believed to be impossible and ships disabled by shots from guns as yet invisible. We have been told that modern sea fights could be determined in the first ten minutes yet we have seen that it took six hours to decide one of the greatest ocean battles of the present war. We have seen ships of shallow draft used as fortresses to protect land armies on the Belgian coast.

"We read only yesterday of submarines gliding unchallenged past the impregnable fortress of Gibraltar and the guardian ships that watch the straits. We have seen fleet cruisers raiding the coast and eluding their pursuers by the help of dirigibles, hovering far above and warning through the new miracle, wireless telegraphy, the ships beneath.

How To Meet the Issue

"With what weapons, by what strategy, shall we meet the terror of the submarine; the still unrevealed possibilities of the airship? It is to you, gentlemen, that this question must be put. It is to you your secretary of the navy looks for an answer. My earnest word, my solemn plea today is to urge you fearlessly to discard

Musical Treat For Assembly Patrons In Russian Quartet

On August 4, the attraction at the Rock River Assembly will be the Tschalkowsky (Chy-koff-ski) Quartette and Miss Elizabeth Wood.

Four disciples of Tschalkowsky the illustrious Russian, one of the greatest composers, form the Tschalkowsky Quartette. It is a remarkable company of artists. It is a party of cultured gentlemen, born, bred and educated in the centers of musical art—at the fountain head of the best music—who have heard, studied and played the greatest music, under the greatest conductors and with the greatest players, who follow music as an art and not as a trade, who play intelligently, correctly, even modestly, not striving to be heard

FEDERAL INSPECTION OF MEAT INEXPENSIVE

COST IS LESS THAN SIX CENTS PER ANIMAL SAYS EXPERT.

(Associated Press)

San Francisco, June 26—The fact that the cost of federal meat inspection is less than six cents for each of the millions of animals slaughtered, was brought out in a paper by Dr. George Ditewig of the bureau of animal industry of the U. S. department of Agriculture, presented before the annual meeting of the American Academy of Medicine here today. In citing his figures Dr. Ditewig was trying to drive home "Economic Importance of the Federal Inspection of Meats and Meat-Food Products Destined for Commerce," the subject of his address.

He said: "In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, inspection was maintained at a total of $93 establishments in 244 cities and towns in the United States. The total of animals inspected at the time of slaughter was 56,909,000 and the number of these passed on slaughter inspected was 56,473,000. The quantity of meats and products condemned on re-inspection, on account of having been tainted, rancid or otherwise unwholesome, amounted to several million pounds.

"The sum appropriated by congress for meat inspection for that year was $3,200,000, within which sum the service was maintained. In other words, the cost to the people of the United States was less than six cents for each of the 56,909,000 animals slaughtered. This charge covered the entire inspection from the live animals to the final examination of the meats and the finished products when ready for delivery to customers."

It was, however, not only in the protection of the people from unfit food that the value of federal inspection, should be found, he said, but also in the eradication of diseased herds, which cause enormous losses on the farms.

On such a mission he pointed out that the federal inspectors were without authority to enter the several states without their consent, and as an essential to the success of the project he urged the adequate exercise of state police powers. He said, "When that time arrives, the federal meat inspection service will be found ready to provide in great volume the essential data, and in other ways contribute to the success of the great undertaking."

DEATH STRUCK LONE OLD MAN IN NIGHT

BENJAMIN F. FILSON WAS FOUND DEAD ON BED EARLY THIS MORNING.

INQUEST HELD THIS AFTERNOON

Jury Found That Death Resulted
From Natural Causes—
Funeral Monday.

On Friday evening a fishing trip had been planned by Samuel Lenox and Benjamin F. Filson for early this morning. Mr. Lenox went to the Filson home on West Water street and not seeing Mr. Filson around and finding the door ajar entered the house and there lying on the bed he found Mr. Filson. He walked over to him and discovered that he was cold in death. He notified neighbors and later the coroner, George Stephan of Ashton, who came to this city and held an inquest this afternoon.

Mr. Filson suffered a paralytic stroke on the left side two or three years ago but was in his usual health yesterday and was down town during the afternoon. It is believed he suffered another stroke during the night, before retiring, and fell onto the bed. When found he was lying face down on the bed with his feet resting on the floor.

Mr. Filson was born in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, and was about 74 years of age. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted in one of the Pennsylvania regiments and served until the close of the war. Later he came to Illinois and was located at Franklin Grove for a time and in 1880 he came to Dixon, where he has since resided. He was never married and made his home with a maiden sister until her death a few years ago. Mr. Filson was for many years janitor of the north side public school.

The funeral will be held on Monday morning at 9 o'clock from the Morris & Preston chapel on East First street, with interment at Mt. Union cemetery east of this city.

The coroner's jury, composed of the following, returned a verdict of death from natural causes: P. A. Lennon, R. C. Bovey, Joseph Schellhammer, W. W. Woolley, J. B. White and George F. Murray.

George Krug is attending the auto race in Chicago today.

"EVERYBODY'S" GIVES BRIGGS A WRITE-UP

DIXON CARTOONIST IS MADE THE SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATED
SKETCH.

Accompanying an excellent cut with bits of his illustrations surrounding it, Everybody's Magazine of July contains a short article by C. A. Briggs, among other "Comic-ers" of national fame. It answers the question of whether he ever lived in a country town by referring to his birthplace, Reedsburg, Wisconsin, and to Dixon, Illinois, where he lived during a part of his boyhood. Making newspaper drawings in St. Louis turned his mind to comics, the item says, "for some reason or other." That "The Days of Real Sport," one of Briggs' famous series, threatens Chicago in musical comedy next season is a great tribute to his genius. "Briggs is an artist in his interpretation of life," it goes on to say, and speaks of his great popularity with friends, and his record as a man of many clubs.

Seek To Learn Identity Of Stranger Suicide At Rockford

Rockford, June 25—Mystery still surrounds the identity of a stranger who committed suicide in the toilet room of the C. & N. W. depot by sending a revolver bullet into his temple shortly before 10 o'clock last night and who died at Rockford hospital an hour later.

Every possible mark of identification had been destroyed in advance of the tragedy. The laundry mark on an apparently new collar had been cut out, three on a pocket handkerchief had been ripped off and the maker's tags on every garment worn had been removed. A pocket knife and an Inger soil watch were the only articles in the pockets.

The deceased was a man in the early 30's weighing about 140 pounds. He was about five feet ten inches in height with black hair, brown eyes Speedway, Chicago, June 26—At the 400th mile it appeared that Resta, barring accidents, would win.

(Associated Press)

Chicago, June 26—Twenty years ago a "horseless carriage" driven by Charles Duryea of Massachusetts, plowed through snow and slush from Chicago to Evanston in the first auto mobile race ever held in this country. His average time was 7.5 miles per hour.

This morning at 10 o'clock twenty one of the best known drivers in the country started a 500-mile derby over the two-mile plank track of the Chicago Speedway, for $54,000 in prize money, and with the expectation of going more than twelve times as fast as Duryea did. Thousands of spectators witnessed the start.

Delayed In Start.

The start of the big race was delayed until 10:30 o'clock, the delay being caused by a broken rod on Burman's machine.

Chandler withdrew at the twenty-fourth mile with a broken shaft, leaving twenty in the race, including Burman.

Cooper In Lead.

At the 100-mile mark E. Cooper in his Stutz was in the lead, his rate of speed having been 104 miles an hour, breaking all competitive records, or eleven miles faster than DePalma's previous record. Wilcox withdrew from the race with a broken machine.

Resta Takes Lead

At the 200-mile mark Resta in his Peugeot had taken the lead, his average speed to this mark being 93 miles an hour, breaking all world's record for that distance.

At the 320 mile mark he was still in the lead with the same average speed, and here too he broke existing records for the distance.

Haupt, Henning and Limberg with drew from the race before the 320 mile mark was reached.

SHE DIDN'T HAVE TO SCRUB HOSPITAL FLOORS

Miss Nona McAdoo, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury

Miss Nona McAdoo, daughter of William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, did not have to scrub hospital floors in France. She was a nurse. They had regular scrub ladies there to scrub floors. Miss McAdoo was very indignant about the stories cabled from France when she stepped from the liner Rochambeau the other day. This photograph shows her leaving the ship.

"I'm no quitter," she told the reporters, "and don't think I left France because the work was too hard."

She was accompanied by her friend, Miss Katherine Britton. She was met down the bay by her father. The secretary also was anxious to clear his daughter of the charge of having quit because of the hard work. "Look at her," he said to the reporters. "She does not weigh a hundred pounds."

"I came back because father ordered me to," said Miss McAdoo. "I never had to scrub floors. I was a nurse, and there were other people there to do the scrubbing. If I get back my health in time I shall return to the hospitals."

THE TAX AMENDMENT.

According to joint resolutions adopted by both houses of the Illinois legislature the tax amendment proposed by the special tax commission in 1911 will be submitted to the people at the November election next year. This proposed amendment will not in itself make any change in the present system of taxation. It will simply remove some of the restrictions which now render statutory changes by the general assembly impossible. If this amendment is adopted it will give to the legislature the control of legislation affecting personal property taxation similar to that now held by the legislatures of New York, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and other states in which successful steps have been taken toward the effective and equitable taxation of modern forms of wealth. New York state derives $37,000,000 a year by special taxes in addition to revenues always derived from the general tax on personal property, and these new sources of revenue have reduced the proportion of the total tax burden borne by real property from 87 to 65 per cent. Other states are realizing from ten to 25 times more revenue than before from intangible property, and real estate burdens are proportionately decreased. Under the present system, which has been in vogue in Illinois since 1848, greater burdens are constantly heaped upon real property. Such a change as provided by this amendment will make it possible for the general assembly to devise scientific and just methods for the raising of adequate public revenues and the equalizing of existing tax burdens which will be of general benefit. The submission of this amendment to the people was urged by an overwhelming popular vote on November 5, 1912, but failed to receive endorsement by the general assembly elected at the time. The present assembly has acted wisely in giving it favorable attention. It has opened the way for needed tax reform in Illinois.—The Farmers' Review.

CONCERNING THE CANAL.

There has been published in connection with initial reports regarding traffic through the Panama canal, some criticism of the enterprise as a business venture. It is declared that there is little hope of realizing more than three per cent interest on the investment.

Any estimates based on the return from the business of the canal during the six months it has been in operation are necessarily misleading. War has demoralized the traffic on which the gateway between the Atlantic and Pacific will depend, and it is impossible to say how long the unsettled conditions will continue. Nor is it possible to say how long the after-effects will be felt.

The returns referred to show that 500 boats passed through the canal and that they paid toll in excess of $2,000,000. Almost half of the freight carried was between ports of the United States and it was pretty evenly divided as to shipments between eastern and western ports. The Atlantic coast had just a shade the best of the trading, sending out more than it received from the Pacific coast.

The canal, then, is now largely a domestic enterprise. It has hardly entered upon its career as an international institution. That will begin after the war in Europe ends and the commerce of the world can be renewed. Then and not until then will it be known whether the enterprise will earn interest on the money expended in building it.

As to whether the canal will justify its construction, there need be no doubt. Even though its revenues are insufficient to pay interest on the bonds, it will make good in other ways. In addition to stimulating American coast trade, it will prove a powerful factor in regulating freight rates. Already the transcontinental railroads have asked the interstate commerce commission to readjust their rates in order to meet water competition.

Then, too, there is the matter of developing trade with South America. To this end the canal will prove most valuable. The zone, it is predicted, will eventually become a great clearinghouse for business between the United States and Latin America and its utility in this respect will more than offset the cost of the construction of the canal.

AND SUGAR GOES HIGHER.

Now that the canning season is on, sugar is in the clouds. But it is not wholly because of the canning demand that the price is up. The industry is not of sufficient proportions to take care of both the war-created demand and the call from the kitchens.

When the democratic congress passed the Underwood bill, cutting sugar duties and threatening ultimate free trade in foreign sugar, the industry began to shrivel. Under the conditions it was unsafe to enlarge old plants or to build new ones. Whole communities engaged in raising sugar beets abandoned the business. And so long as the threat hangs over their heads, these farmers will give their attention to other lines of agriculture.

In a recent publication, the department of agriculture at Washington makes an effort to encourage beet sugar raising. It shows that the growing beet enriches the soil when rotated with other crops, and it offers statistics proving a 41 per cent increase in productivity under such cultivation. It is a most convincing argument in favor of the development of the beet industry.

When congress again becomes republican and a sensible, reasonable law takes the place of the Underwood tariff bill, this publication will be of service.

MURDER AND THE GOLDEN RULE.

New York World — When a trusty in the Illinois state penitentiary struck the warden's wife dead with a heavy bottle and set fire to the room, he aimed a blow at the Golden Rule method of managing prisons. Warden Allen is a leader in the humanitarian school of penal authorities. His wife was a benefactor to the inmates.

It is the Golden Rule theory that prisoners are as other men, thrust into crime by unhappy environment, needing above all things the fair chance, capable of being salvaged to society. This must be true of many, and every possible attempt to build up the character of such men, vary their employment, guard their health, fit them for industry and inspire them with confidence and hope will have the sympathy of the compassionate. As true economy, it should command also the assent of governments.

But the Allen murder reminds us that there are born criminals. There are those whom no kindness can reclaim and who under any system will remain the problem of penology. For such cases there must always be restraint. Even for the well-intentioned something is needed which reformers seem to forget—and that is discipline.

CRITICAL JUDGMENT.

My head ached fierce while I was reading the latest work of Oppenheim, and, weary of much mental feeding, I said, "Such fiction is a crime. His characters are merely spectres, who through the tiresome chapters run; his dukes and diplomats and rectors are sawdust dummies, every one. A book should mirror human action and show the author's studied men, if it would give me satisfaction—but this man wields a trifling pen." One day when health again had found me, "I'll read that novel now," I said, for it of all the books around me, was just the one I hadn't read. I found it then a four time winner, a ripping yarn that hit the spot, and when they called me in to dinner, I answered, "Scat! I want it not! That man is capable of treason who'd leave a book like this to eat—the redhot novel of the season, a book that simply can't be beat!"

At its best estate, a prison is a place where many persons of erratic past and unruly ways are condemned by force, chafing to be free. Firm control is indispensable. The warden should be a friend, but he must be the master.

SHOULD VETO IT.

The governor should not hesitate to veto the motion picture censorship bill.

It is one of the "jobs" the legislature succeeded in putting over on the public. Nobody wants it, except a few who profit by it.

The Chicago Tribune expresses public sentiment very accurately when it says the bill is "an ill-considered expression of an unwise and un-American tendency toward bureaucracy."

If the bill is signed, three men named by the secretary of state will say what shall be shown in the moving picture theatres of the state. Secretary of State Stevenson is a man of discretion, but his successor may not be.

Suppose, for instance, the secretary of state did not believe in showing any play which has temperature as its moral. Or suppose he did not believe in motion picture plays at all and insisted on eliminating everything but educational subjects. Or suppose again he believed in permitting only those religious subjects which fit a certain religious creed to go through.

Pictures that a large part of the people of the state wanted to see could not be seen because this secretary, through his three appointees, would arbitrarily bar them.

It is doubtful if there are three men in the state qualified to decide what moving pictures the people should see and what they should not be permitted to see.

Being agreeable is very essential, but it does not mean everything. A dead beat is always agreeable.

INSECTS ARE GREATEST ENEMY OF HUMANS

NOTED PHYSICIAN TELLS OF MAN'S BATTLE AGAINST DISEASE SPREADERS

(Associated Press)

San Francisco, June 26—Dr. Woods Hutchinson of New York, president of the American Academy of Medicine, in his address before the Academy here today said the world would see still further remarkable progress in the development of the Tropics, and that in all colonization schemes the physician should prepare the way.

"The Physician as a Pioneer" was his subject, in line with the general topic to which all the sessions of this year's Academy meeting are devoted, namely, "Medicine in its Relations to Commerce and Transportation."

Dr. Hutchinson said in part:

"The real enemy of the pioneer, the chief obstacle to the spread of civilization is not Indians, or wolves, or rattlesnakes or even famine or flood—or winter cold or tropic heat, but insects. Most schemes of colonization that failed—failed not from famine, or the attack of enemies, but through disease. And more than half of them from one disease—malaria. This is not merely the Age of Man, but the Age of Insects, geologically considered, and the battle is to the death between them for the possession of the earth.

"In the tropics, the insects get the whip hand of man and keep him stupid, short-lived and uncivilized. It was the Plague of Flies, the bloody tyranny of insects that drove man out of the warm, comfortable fertile tropics into the chilly, rain-swept, half the year frozen North. Now, grown to full human stature he is coming back to invade and reconquer the tropics and put to flight the ancient foes of the race.

"In an earlier day, the first requisite of a new colony, or a pioneering expedition, was a captain, a bold and skilful fighting man, with muskets for every grown man in the party, and plenty of powder and ball. But now, the first and most fundamental requirements of a new colony are a doctor-engineer with microscope and test tubes, spades and trenching machines, and plenty of quinine, kerosene and mosquito netting.

STARTS SCHOOL FOR STUDY OF BIG WAR

the worship of all things that are old and to adopt courageously anything that is new the moment some development of the present convinces you that the old way is no longer the right way, or that the new way points the path to victory. It is the courage of the American people in facing new conditions from the time our forefathers dared and mastered the terrors of the wilderness and built there in a new nation with a new government that has made us great today. Holding wisely to what is good in the past, to such principles as stand the acid test of this great war, do not fear to cast aside what have proven to be mere shackles of convention and daring to go forward.

"I hereby pledge myself to spare no effort to assist this onward march. Rest assured that what you plan will find a sympathetic and attentive ear. I want to feel that when my term of office closes my successor will find, in orderly arrangement, the most perfect plans and methods human wisdom can invent, keep always up to date, for the conduct of our navy in time of war, and it is here that the studies necessary for such plans must be carried on."

A Narrative Fact Story Based Authoritatively on the Inexorable Mathematics of War—What Can Be Done to Oppose an Invading Army With Our Actual Present Resources In Regulars, Trained Militia, Untrained Citizens, Coast Defenses, Field Artillery, and All Other Weapons of Defense.

While he spoke another detachment of the landing party had been busy among the huddle of boats in the harbor. Some were being made up into a tow. Others were being scuttled at their moorings. A third detachment was knocking holes into the smaller craft hauled up on shore. Three sailors were just driving boat hooks through the bottom of an untipped catboat when a tall young fisherman leaped at them with an oaken tiller handle and struck one down. The other two closed on him, but he got away almost instantly at the sound of a sharp order. They tore themselves away and jumped aside.

There was another order in the same sharp voice. Instantly while the fisherman still stood staring, with his weapon in the motion of striking, a blast of fire spat at him from six carlines. His head went up, exposing his broad brown throat. He thrust his hands before him, all the fingers outspread. With his eyes wide open he tottered and pitched face down. Another order and the sailors wheeled, covering the islanders.

"Dan!" screamed a girl in the crowd. "Hush! Don't look!" An older woman caught her around the neck and pressed the girl's face to her breast.

"He brought it on himself," said the lieutenant to the fishermen. "Take warning! That is war!" He turned and walked to the beach.

The dead man lay where he had fallen. Slowly clinching and unclenching their hands, the big, weather-beaten, strong men stared at the corpse that lay huddled so awkwardly behind the sailors. One of the women touched a white-haired, white-bearded islander on the arm. "Won't they let us have him?" She turned her eyes toward the dead man. The old man addressed the lieutenant. "I wanted to ask you"—he began, but a signal man interrupted him, pointing at his head. The black islander looked at him, bewildered. Impatiently the sailor pointed again, and the islander understood. Hesitatingly, reluctantly, he took off his hat. Crushing his brain with the grip of helpless anger, he faced the officer.

"I wanted to know—sir—if he be the one you couldn't"—he indicated the corpse.

"Yes!" answered the officer shortly.

"You can have him!" With a change in his voice he added: "I am sorry, very sorry. Yes, you may take him away."

FOREIGN FIGHTERS SET FOOT ON THE MAINLAND OF THE UNITED STATES.

CHAPTER V.
Sweeping the Floor Clean For the Enemy Army.

So fell brave Block Island. It had greeted the sunrise with the stars and stripes hoisted defiantly in the face of the invader. The setting sun shone on the flag of the enemy. So, too, had fallen the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard with their stout-hearted, passionately American population. They had yielded, not to ignominious fear, but to the irresistible mechanics of war.

The people of Block Island, watching destroyers steaming slowly toward the New England coast with strings of their fishing boats in tow, noted a curious thing. Every boat was laden with fish nets. Block Island wondered what a fighting navy meant to do with fish nets. Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard wondered, too, for they also had been stripped of their gear.

Following the long tows with their leaped brown freight, six cruisers moved toward the coast, each guarded by destroyers, whose men watched the sea for a periscope, or for the white-tailed, broken water that would indicate the presence of a submarine. [A submarine cannot attack until it has risen near enough to the surface to lift its periscope above water. Having thus obtained its aim, it submerges again only deep enough to conceal the periscope. It fires its torpedo blind when submerged. If it dives too deep it might send the weapon harmlessly under the ship's keel. Hence, it is possible often to "spot" the disturbed, whitened water above a submarine even though it is sunk out of sight.]

They moved fast, until they were within three miles of land. Then they opened fire.

Steaming rapidly up and down, ship behind ship, they loosed all their broadside batteries, starboard and port in turn, simultaneously. The blast killed the wind and made an infernal little gale of its own around each ship, that spun in hot ascending columns. Surface swimming fish were struck dead and floated in schools on the water miles away. Even the bottom haunting creatures felt the shock and scurried into the sand and mud.

The chart under the shaded light in the admiral's cabin had a semicircle marked on it—a semicircle that made a great segment into the land. As if it were in the electric air, the country in that zone of fire melted. Houses vanished into stone dust and plaster dust even as the screaming thing that had done it struck houses a mile beyond and threw them on each other. Streets became pits with sloping sides that burned. Trees rocked, roaring as in a gale, and were tossed high and fell twisted in flame. The land shriveled.

The enemy fleet was biting into the sea vitals of the commercial United States, the southern coast of New England between Cape Cod and Long Island sound, whose possession is the key to the manufacturing and industrial life of the east.

Battleships lying off the mouth of Buzzards Bay were dropping shells into the harbor and into the shores. One ship had ventured close into the land, approaching within the zone of fire from Fort Rodman, and had dropped shells near New Bedford. Hidden by intervening hills it had escaped return fire and was now lying just out of range, dropping an occasional fifteen inch projectile toward the defenses. [The extreme range of the present armament of American harbor defenses is 23,000 yards. This is not a reliably effective fighting range and is merely stated as being the extreme range "under crucial test" of the twelve inch steel rifled mortars. The rifled guns as now mounted have a range of not more than 13,000 yards. Battleships now being constructed are armed with fifteen and sixteen inch guns that can outrange the extreme theoretical range of the mortars.]

Other ships were firing into Narragansett bay. They, too, were firing at immensely long range, to avoid return fire from the defenses. Montauk Point's wireless transmitted a dispatch that three vessels were standing in there and lowering boats. Then the apparatus fell silent. Point Judith's wireless had ceased speaking soon after dusk. Its last dispatch was that shells were falling near it. An hour later its operators reported from Narragansett Pier that the tower had been destroyed.

Watch Hill and Westerly, on Rhode Island's southwestern border, said a message from near by Stonington, were burning, and were being wrecked by heavy shells. Fort Wright telegraphed that this was fire from two battleships standing just outside of range from the fort's mortars and rifles and throwing shells from fifteen inch guns.

But these great guns were being used only at intervals. Though their bite could rend towns, they destroyed themselves as they wreaked destruction. The acid fumes from their monster powder charges ate out their scientifically rifled cores. They had to be spared.

The real attack came from the heavy cruisers, standing close in and working four, five and eight inch guns. For every shot that the battleships' mammoth fired the cruisers fired a hundred. It was not a bombardment. It was a driving hail of whirling, smashing, exploding metal that whipped the coast between Watch Hill and Point Judith. Now the flocks of shells went high to reach far to their farthest range into the land. Now they went low to sweep through the cover near shore. Sometimes the steel things dove, as if in sudden uncontrollable fury, at one given spot. Again, they spread out into a dreadful cone that danced along a five mile stretch like a dancing whirlwind. The very beasts of the woods, the birds in their nests, were dead.

To the survivors who had escaped from the first red blast the thing seemed only a deed of insane wickedness. What had they done, they asked each other with sobbing breaths, to bring a steel navy at them? What could a great, powerful enemy gain by this murder of unarmed country folk?

The men who were working the ships' guns were from little villages, from pretty seashore hamlets like these themselves. They were not thinking of the habitations which were being blasted away. It was an operation of war. With their brooms of steel and fire they simply were sweeping clear the floor on which that army was to set its foot.

Far in shore of the flame torn cruisers, safe from any land fire unless the parabolae of the naval projectiles as if they were under a bombproof arch, certain little vessels had toiled up and down from the beginning. Slowly, for they dragged between them long wire cables that hung down to the sea bottom, they moved back and forth along the beach, fishing. The fish they were trying to catch were spherical and conical steel fish that bore little protuberances on their tops like the sprouting horns of a yearling kid.

A touch as soft as the touch of a lover's hand could drive those little horns inward to awaken a slumbering little devil of fulminate of mercury whose sleep is so light that a mere tap will break it. And the fulminate's explosion would detonate 300 pounds of gun cotton.

The submarine mine says to the big ships, "I am death!" and they cannot answer it.

But there is an answer to the mine. It is the mine sweeper that drags for them. The men on these mine sweepers dedicate themselves to the tomb. Some must inevitably perish. They will find a mine with their keels instead of their groping drags, or they will grapple one too close, or their wire cable will clutch two mines and swing them together so that the little horns touch.

But if the mine sweepers are permitted to work on the mines may kill and kill and kill, yet in the end they will be gathered in.

There is an absolute answer to the mine sweepers. It is to hammer them with rapid fire from the shore. These little vessels, dragging laboriously, present targets that scarcely move. No artillery can miss them.

But again there is an answer to the mine protecting guns. It is long range fire from the ships that lie safely outside of the mine fields.

There is only one answer to that. It is for defenders on land to plant huge guns far inland that can reach the ships and beat them back that they dare not come close enough to reach the lesser shore artillery nearer the sea.

This formula of shore defense is a formula so simple that a mathematician given the conditions can work it out with simple arithmetic though he never had seen a cannon in his life.

Guns, guns and again guns—and an army to protect them! This was the only possible reply to the fleet that was pounding the coast. The United States had not enough sufficiently powerful mobile coast guns and siege guns. It had not enough artilleryists to fight what guns there were. And it had not enough ammunition to provide them with food.

In Bethlehem, Pa.; up the Hudson, in smoky Watervliet; in Hartford and Bridgeport and New Haven and a dozen other towns, with machinery hastily assembled and workmen hastily learning, they were trying now to make projectiles enough and guns enough. They were trying to make enough powder in Delaware and New Jersey.

In the encampment of the United States army at that moment trains were delivering guns—guns made in record time, magnificent testimony to American efficiency under stress. But the guns were coming in one by one, to meet an enemy who was beating at the gates and could not be stopped except with hundreds.

Even then the flagship off the coast was spluttering a code into the night. It was a long code, but its meaning was short. It meant "Now!"

The mine sweepers hauled their gear and came out. Fourteen had gone in. Those that came out were nine.

Before they had well begun to move the beach was white with ships' boats, and 900 bluejackets and marines set foot on the mainland of the United States.

With sharpened knives in their sheaths, and loaded carbines and bandoleers filled with cartridges, and entrenching tools and provisions, each man of that first force presented the highest attainable unit efficiency for war.

The boats were scarcely off the beach to return to the ships before 800 of these units were trotting through the upland, throwing out advancing parties and making hasty trenches from which in a moment there looked the greyhound muzzles of machine guns.

On the shore the strand party was shelling sand anchors and rigging derricks. Others were setting together the five and one-half foot sections of jointed hollow masts for the wireless. When the boats beached again, with more men, two forty foot masts reached into the night, and hand power generators were making the antennae pulse with their mysterious life.

Launches came in now, dragging wide, flat bottomed pontoons and swinging them on to shore and speeding back for more. Men snatched at them and held them in the surf and ran their mooring up the beach, while others carried out kedges and boat anchors from all sides to make them lie steady in the ground swell.

The beach shone white as day all at once. The destroyers had steamed in and were giving their men aid with their searchlights.

In swung more pontoons. Broadside to broadside, kedged and anchored out, they were moored out into the sea at half a dozen parts of the beach. Laid far enough apart that they should not touch, however hard the swell might strive to grind them together, they formed floating piers reaching beyond the farthest outer line of surf. From pontoon to pontoon ran gangplanks lashed fast.

Three hours had passed. Three times the ships' boats had made the trip between warships and shore—thirty naval service cutters, each carrying thirty men. Twenty-seven hundred sailors, marines and soldiers were holding the Rhode Island coast.

From the trenches of the advance party a wireless spoke to the cruiser bearing the senior officer. "Motor scouts reported in front, on road, three thousand yards in. Will fire rocket indicating direction."

The rocket burst. For a minute it made all that part of the black country stand out as under lightning. "Crash!" said the ship. Over the bluejackets swept the shells and burst.

"Crash!" said another ship. "Apparently effective," said the wireless again. "Shall send patrols forward." And again it spoke. In half an hour: "Enemy driven back. Our patrols hold road. Barb wire entanglements completed. Scouts in. Report land clear, except for enemy cavalry in force inland out of range."

A BIT OF ADVICE
FIRST—DON'T DELAY, SECOND—DON'T EXPERIMENT.

If you suffer from backache, headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Dixon residents desire more convincing proof of their effectiveness than the statement of a Dixon citizen who has used them and willingly testifies to their worth?

Mrs. J. Caritey, 511 Spruce street, Dixon, says: "Some few years ago I suffered from a severe attack of kidney trouble. My back was so sore that I couldn't walk erect and mornings it was hard for me to get out of bed. It was next to impossible for me to stoop over. I had tried various medicines, but they had no benefit and had about given up hope of getting better. A friend recommended Doan's Kidney Pills so I got some at Leake Bros. Co.'s drug store. By the time I had finished two boxes I was able to sit up in bed and my back felt stronger. I used eight boxes and had no more trouble until I injured my back a short time ago. Doan's Kidney Pills then gave me immediate relief."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Caritey had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Diamond Edge Hatchets are made in all the various styles. The cutting edge of each hatchet is made of extra crucible steel, carefully tempered, thoroughly tested, and ground down to a perfect cutting edge. The handles are carefully set, and they have that balance and feel that the workman demands.

A Diamond Edge Hatchet costs you a few cents more than the other kind. For these few cents you get the difference between the thoroughbred and the scrub; you get the finest of steel; the tested quality of temper; the careful balance; the perfect finish; the "tone" and "clash" that satisfies. You are justified in paying any reasonable price for such quality.
